

Beth-Ann Kozlovich

VICE PRESIDENT

Beth-Ann Kozlovich was a trusted voice in Hawai'i media for nearly two decades as host and executive producer of the popular Hawai'i Public Radio program "Town Square," and later created and hosted "The Conversation."

Over the past four years, she built upon her journalistic success by serving as communications and public relations director for Kāhi Mōhala and as incident commander for the hospital's pandemic response. Earlier in her career, Kozlovich was the director of development for the American Lung Association of Hawai'i. She is a graduate of UCLA where she earned a bachelor's degree in English literature.

As someone who has connected with Hawai'i's communities on a variety of issues and excelled as an empathic voice for the state's only free-standing behavioral health hospital for children and youth, Kozlovich is bringing that same thoughtfulness and passion to CommPac's clients, in addition to her extensive experience in all facets of media relations, marketing, and crisis and issues management.

Kozlovich also has deep experience in the nonprofit sector including fund development and philanthropy. She serves on the Boards of Directors of the Rotary Club of Honolulu, Mental Health America of Hawaii and the Hawaii Arts Alliance. She received the Association for Women in Communication national Clarion Award for the weeklong series, Homelessness from the Outside In, and media awards from the Coalition for a Tobacco-Free Hawai'i, NAMI Hawaii and the Hawaii Psychological Association.
